About the Symposium

Mapping the Akbarian Corpus is the inaugural symposium of the Muhyiddin Archive Project (MAP), held in Murcia, the birthplace of Muḥyiddīn Muḥammad Ibn al-‘Arabī. Over three days, scholars from around the world each take up a single work — including many lesser-known books, epistles and letters — as a first step towards a new comprehensive description of his writings.

MAP, established in 2001, is part of a long and continuous tradition of preserving, describing and authenticating the writings of Ibn al-‘Arabī. His teachings have come down to us in manuscript form: carefully copied, transmitted, annotated and studied by generations of scholars and students. To understand Ibn ‘Arabi faithfully, it is essential to both preserve and accurately describe the very materials that have carried his words across the centuries. Our mission is to preserve and advance this invaluable legacy in the digital era according to the highest standards of digital scholarship, and to make it accessible to the wider interested public.

To learn more or to support the project, please write to map@ibnarabisociety.org.uk.

With thanks to

We are deeply grateful to the Archaeological Museum of Murcia for so generously hosting this symposium, and in particular to Mariángeles Gómez Ródenas, Head of the Museums and Exhibitions Service, and Javier Romera Cano, Curator and Coordinator of the Museum System, as well as to MIAS UK for sponsoring the symposium and their ongoing support.

Our warmest thanks also go to our symposium coordinator, Sara Margarit González for her care and tireless work, and to Leo Sims for his invaluable graphic design work.
